I feel Long Island Academy should be closed for a number of reasons:

- 1) Twenty First Century citizens require skills and dispositions that can only be garnered through human discourse and interaction. These skills and dispositions are informally acquired in a populated school setting. Yes, students meet with academic success through CDLI, and get some socialization through cyber engagement, but there is nothing like face to face human contact.
- 2) A cost analysis of running a large building, providing busing, a budget and a full staff for one pupil might show that it is economically unfeasible.
- 3) The current model is exclusive (and privileged), not inclusive.
- 4) Historically, students from Long Island Academy have attended school off island.
